San Francisco, CA- With the prices of vintage originals reaching $6,000 and more, who could believe that a replica of the famous tricone—a replica that faithfully reproduces the legendary style and tone of this ultra-rare collector's item—could be produced to sell at the affordable price of just $595.?

Saga has done exactly that with the introduction of its Regal RC-51 tricone—players and collectors alike will thrill to the visual and tonal beauty of this masterpiece. Rock and Blues artists will want to add the tricone's distinctive tone and amazing volume to their arsenal of guitar sounds. In fact, the Regal RC-51 is so attractively priced that any serious guitar student can now own a piece of guitar history and go on to create sounds and styles as yet unimagined!

The Regal RC-51 features a nickel-plated bell-brass body and a traditional T-style spider bridge connected to three spun aluminum cones. The slim mahogany neck features an adjustable truss rod and an elegant pearloid peghead overlay with colored Regal logo. All hardware is heavily nickel-plated and the sealed, die cast tuners offer easy, accurate tuning. Each instrument is carefully shop adjusted before shipping.

The new Regal RC-52 tricone is both a faithful vintage replica and a modern player's instrument—all wrapped up with an amazing low price—another world-beater from Saga!
