San Francisco, CA - July 1, 2005 - NEW REGAL TRICONE FEATURES TEXAS TEA POWDER-COATED FINISH!

There's a new, eye-catching finish on the latest Tricone metal-body guitar from Saga—a beautiful aged bronze patina with a texture that sets the RC-58TT apart from the rest! This monochromatic color scheme, which includes cover plate and tailpiece, is set off by the sparkling pearloid peghead veneer with its' colorful Regal logo—the same logo that has graced the world's finest guitars for over 70 years. The subtle, understated beauty of the new RC-58TT perfectly matches the beauty of tone and unsurpassed volume that has made the new Regal Tricone series the professional musician's guitar of choice.

All other features of the Regal RC-58TT are the same as the already popular RC-51 model tricone available. The brass body has the traditional arrangement of three spun aluminum cones with T-style spider bridge and rock maple saddle. The slim mahogany neck has an adjustable truss rod and joins the body at the 12th fret. The die-cast tuning machines are chrome plated and each instrument is fully shop-adjusted prior to shipment.

The distinctive beauty of the Regal RC-58TT harks back to the Art Deco era—yet is as modern as tomorrow. The new Texas tea powder-coated finish makes this fine guitar stand out in any crowd—let alone your average music store display!

You'll find that the new Regal RC-58TT is just the latest best-seller in the distinguished tradition of Saga musical Instruments!
