SAGA Adds RM-75 F-Model Mandolin To Rover Line!

San Francisco, CA / June 12, 2004 – Introducing the new RM-75, hand-carved, professional level F-model mandolin for under $400

The new Rover RM-75 sets the standard by which all moderately priced mandolins will be judged—and it will also make the highest priced ones extremely nervous, too! All proportions and features are exactly like vintage originals produced during the 1920's and 1930's that are highly collected today.

From its perfectly carved scroll, multiple bound body, dove-tail neck joint, nitro finish, and warm brown-burst finish, it is clear that attention was paid to every detail in making these fine, hand-carved instruments suitable for any player at any level. Only the finest materials are chosen for these instruments, in addition to their fine workmanship, including: a top of select solid spruce, back, sides and neck are solid maple, a vintage-style rosewood compensated, adjustable bridge for perfect intonation, and a 21-fret rosewood fingerboard with a scalloped extension to minimize pick noise—a feature usually found only on the most expensive professional instruments! A Rover logo in lovely abalone and white pearl graces the headstock as the finishing touch.

The Rover RM-75 could be the best value-for-money in mandolin history—order now and let your customer be the judge!
